While being a noob to programming languages, I've become fluent in C++, C#, Java and SQL. I hope to one day become fluent in the JVM languages, but in the mean time, I will only be known as a Java/JVM coder. I've long been a proponent of functional languages, and have been writing them for over fifteen years now. But I also like coding in a language that is at once functional and object oriented. My favorite language of the moment is Kotlin. I want to be known as a coder, and a programmer, and nothing else. I don't play sports. I don't play video games. I like to write code. Using Linux for over fifteen years now. I've tried moving to Windows, but the gaming community isn't the same.
