Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus for packaging products such as wood products in cartons in a vertical form-and-fill packaging (VFFP) machine. 2. Description of Related Art A conventional VFFP machine is an apparatus for producing a large number of packages at a relatively high speed, and is also suitable for producing cartons for packing wood products such as sawdust. In a known VFFP machine, a large number of products such as sawdust, for example, is carried on a belt that moves forwardly and backwardly. The products are fed at a predetermined angle on the belt and are deposited on a moving conveyor, whereafter they are deposited vertically on top of one another to produce a layer of products. Thereafter, the layer of products is moved in the form of a package for packaging of products, or is cut from the moving conveyor to produce a plurality of cartons. Such a conventional VFFP machine has a structure in which the products are deposited vertically on top of one another. Thus, the products can be packed efficiently and the products are not allowed to fall to the bottom of a carton, where they may get muddled. However, when a layer of products is moved in the form of a package for packaging of products, the layer of products is fed toward the edge of the conveyor, and accordingly, products deposited on the conveyor are not always efficiently packed in the carton. Further, in the case of cutting the layer of products from the conveyor, a cut is made in the moving direction of the

Evaluation of bleaching efficacy of hand-made "Pali-cana" dentifrice on white spot lesions. Bleaching the teeth whitening toothpaste "Pali-Cana" is based on the principle of removal of the top layer of enamel, which is responsible for the intrinsic or acquired yellowness of the tooth and subsequent re-mineralization of the enamel surface. This study was designed to evaluate the efficacy of bleaching toothpaste "Pali-Cana" on acquired white spot lesions (WSL). Thirty patients with minimum of 12 natural white spot lesions were selected. The lesions were classified into 3 groups based on the severity of the lesions: non-cavitated lesions with an area of 5-10 mm² (group A); non-cavitated lesions with an area of 10-15 mm² (group B); cavitated lesions with an area of 25-30 mm² (group C). In all the patients selected, at least one half of the anterior teeth were included in the study. In group A, bleaching was done at the baseline, and after 21 days following that, the teeth were evaluated by Vickers' hardness testing and 2, 2-thiobarbituric acid (TBA) test to assess the effect of bleaching on WSL and the amount of surface microhardness loss. In group B, bleaching was done at the baseline and after 21 days, the teeth were evaluated for surface microhardness loss and using a shade guide. In group C, bleaching was done at the baseline, and after 14 days, the teeth were evaluated for surface microhardness loss and using a shade guide. In group A, after 21 days, significant increase in microhardness was observed as compared to the baseline. In group B, there was no significant change in microhardness. In group
