The US military says two Americans have been killed in a secret night-time mission against Taliban insurgents in Afghanistan. The announcement came as President Donald Trump was due to deliver a major address on Afghanistan to the US military. The military identified the troops as two pilots and said their deaths were the result of an "enemy action" on Friday in Afghanistan's Helmand province. Two Americans wounded in combat incident in #Afghanistan, are out of the woods and out of harm's way. And their identities are being withheld at this time. Yesterday was filled with hope for the future of our beautiful land. The past year has been a tremendously painful, brave and successful effort for our great armed forces. — Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) December 25, 2018 The helicopter mission took place in Greshk district in Helmand province, the same area where 18 American troops were killed in an attack in August by the Taliban, according to the Afghan government. "We mourn the tragic loss of life of those Americans," Gen Martin E Ulrich, the US commander in Afghanistan, said in a statement. "In this instance, this operation was an unmanned, manned helicopter mission conducted by the [US] Army aviation unit in Afghanistan using the Attack, Apache, and Chinook helicopters." The statement said information on the "narrative and planning" that led to the operation was "not releasable". It said the operation involved "incorporating US and Afghan forces throughout the province of Helmand in an attempt to disrupt and degrade Taliban operations". The dead included nine US soldiers and seven Afghan commandos, according to the statement. The Taliban have been battling Afghan forces

The "Simian Flu" is an RNA virus that has been passed on by apes to humans and wiped out half of humanity, including the chimpanzee and bonobo populations. It's a fast-growing, highly contagious infection and people, with their advanced medical equipment, are still unable to put an end to it. Some say it was man-made, others claim it was an accident, and still others insist that it was inflicted on us by an angry god. But the truth is that all that matters is that half of the human race is gone. All you know about the world outside is what you hear on the emergency broadcasts and the cryptic reports of early survivors. No one knows what happened to humanity, but it's a race against time to find a cure as the Simian Flu spreads quickly. The Simian Flu virus is spreading so fast there is no time to give you in-depth information about the world you've entered, so you're on your own. But what you do know is that some humans are out there, hiding from the Flu, and every human you encounter has a story to tell. Your goal: Escape from the lab, find one of the humans who's been infected by the virus, and save them. All you have to do is find them. Before you can do that, however, you will first need to figure out how to get out of the lab. You can control your ape body and fight your way through the facility. You can also free other apes inside. And what the general population may see as an invasion, you can see as a safety measure. But you still need the key to get out of the facility. And it lies on the other side of the lab. To escape, you'll need to get a key, break into the labs and then collect documents that will lead you to the other side. At the end of this journey, you will have a choice to make - witness humanity's extinction, or leave the world to live forever with the chimpanzees.A semiconductor manufacturing apparatus or a liquid crystal manufacturing apparatus is installed in a clean room that is maintained in a clean state.
