And it has come to pass, my brothers, that you who slept, have remained and the rest have not. Behold, it is the morning and it is the ending of the day, for the children of light and for those in darkness. As I cry over you, (1) And as I see you shivering in the night and in need, all of you are senseless as sheep. 2. And you know who is with me against you on the day of the Lord against you. You are children of bondage that disobey the most High. 3. Come, let us destroy them together. Let us make them like sticks, like stubble. Like fire that has gone out, as stubble of corn that has no water. 4. the word of the Lord is with me, concluding witness with you in Jerusalem, in the house of the kisseh, saying, 5. See, I will give to them a heart that hath no fear, and will never decline a divine report, and they shall be just, and will walk in my law like children of hopes, and my covenant shall be with them. 6. And the mountains and the forests shall fall. And the hills shall depart. And the fruit trees shall bring forth their fruit. And the plants shall yield their fruit. And the hills shall joy, and the trees shall be glad. And the dry land shall know its comfort. 7. And Israel will dwell on their own country, and none shall be desolate, and they shall say, I am a fruit tree of the Lord. And he dwells on the earth. And he will remain. 8. And they shall know that the Most High dwells on the high and exalted mountain. And forever shall obtain that which is coming against them from the West. 9. And they shall dwell in the high and exalted mountain, and none shall be desolate, and none shall be haunted. And a sign of the destroyer shall not endure. And he shall be an incessant destroyer, and a reposer shall not be a star of glory.
