Features Key:

Play as the Blue Planet as you guide your vehicle to the optimal location for the rocket launch.
Cool down and repair the ships with all of the Comet's resources.
The Yellow Planet side of the game features seven first-person arena environments.

Gameplay Elements

- Multi-player game play
- Players can select to either work with, or against, other players.
- Each player starts the game with a shared resource of 100,000 fusion points.
- If the players work together, the shared resource increases up to 500,000 fusion points.
- As players work towards these numbers they will unlock special rewards.
- Many of the missions are designed for three or more players to work together with a shared resource.
- The Astro-Vehicle plays the role of the ship for all the missions.
- Multiple player ships use the same color on the multi-player server, but each are unique on the single player server. All ships save for the Red Planet ship are able to refuel and repair on the yellow planet. These ships are not presented on the multi-player grid. The only ship that can be played against other players is the Blue Planet, which is controlled by the red planet. That ship is the only ship capable of picking up resources from the yellow planet.

Game Development

- The designer develops the game by creating mission templates, designing the mission and making sure all game mechanics are working correctly.
- Game designer communicates to application and graphics devs.

What's new in Blake Stone: Planet Strike:

At the age of 12 I started to build and play Tiger tank of Soviet army. At first, I simulate it in 3D by using only programs that allow me to make easy 3D model of vehicle. (In UDK I used to transfer model into real terrain after I created it). I found this method very useful in studying my model, but not only in it, it didn't helped me much for full model. It is your right that in it, the tank looks like plastic model. I though how to solve this. So I started to create partly model for full model, that with the help of my model of Tiger should show the whole vehicle, in the real size, from top to bottom of the turret. It is this model that I posted on this page and that I now I want to break the fog by uploading here. Please help me and say what else am I missing and what I still have to do. What I have accomplished The model was successful in spite of it took me many days to reach the stage when it is the finished model. I created 3 models, water tank, side-view and top-down. I created the model in 3ds max (for works with tank with top-down view) and OBJ format, so it will be easier to work with it in UDK. I finished this model in 2008, so it could be mostly ok, but it isn't perfect. But the final model looks exactly like what it should be. I created the tank as an actor for the level in which it was supposed to receive mines or be blown up. The goal was to make the viewer tilt and look around the tank to watch it in action. With the new setup I created it looks like "hunting game" but in which the sniper is the tank. It was testing if this setup will create convincing effects as I don't know the tank. I got no complains about this camera setup so I hope it is ok. I tried to show the whole tank in different angles. To get a 360 degree view without losing the panning the viewer must look from different angles. I made my model tilt to left and right, front and back. I haven't changed the camera for this tilting. At the end I got interesting details and interesting, that is for sure. As a modeler I should be now satisfied, but with the setup it is just a puzzle. I felt like if now I will fail

This project is my first publication. It is built using Unity3D. About the Project: I have been working on this game for roughly 10 years. It began as a single terrain generation algorithm that was used to create the terrain for the planet in the game. During the years I have developed many features and have been refining the algorithm. Finally, after a lot of work, I have finished the complete game with a myriad of features. This version is an update of the game that started as a single terrain generator. The developers of this game now owns all rights to the game and the source code. The copyright of the original developer was given to me. Features: Fully 3D engine with 6DoF Complete menu system with all features of the game Changeable terrain by moving the camera Camera mode selection Gamepad support Waterfall and Road generation Multiple mini games: Fishing, Flying, Boating and Mining Extensive toolset for game dev Each game is completely different from the rest About the Game: This is a single terrain generator game that is built in Unity3D. The game is all about building terrain for the planet in the game. There are three parts to the game. The first is the generation of the terrain. There are three types of terrain, gravel, sand, and gravel plus sand. They are generated by using two new algorithms in the game, the gravel algorithm and the sand algorithm. The second part of the game is the exploration of the terrain. The exploration consists of four games, fishing, flying, boating, and mining. When you finish exploring you may select a game from the menu. The third part of the game is the creation of the building. Here the terrain building begins. The goal of the game is to finish a building as soon as it is started. All the building are completely different from the rest.
