I am using a ViewPager to display a list of items from a particular object. I need the user to be able to select an item from that list. Once they do, I have to be able to update the contents of that list to reflect the chosen item. In order to keep the user's item selected, I have to keep the fragment that corresponds to that item active. The problem is that when I update the contents of the list using setUserSelectedItem(), the active fragment is replaced with a new one. I have tried making the view pager inactive (setIndicator(null)), which seems to work, but I can still see the current item that is active in the page indicator, so I assume it is not completely disabled. I am looking for a solution that would let me keep the existing item selected while updating the new contents of the list. Is it possible? How? A: Try adding a flag to the
